TO THE MEMORY OF MY BELOVED PARENTS
THIS VOLUME
IS AFFECTIONATELY DEDICATED.

PREFACE.

FOR many years, since the death of my beloved parents, I have anticipated putting in print this collection of poems, some of which were written by request, thus getting them in convenient form, and to dedicate the same to the fond memory of my dear departed parents, and to the sacred home not less dear because of the nearly fifty years since the "good-bye" was given to those left behind. The object of this book is principally to perpetuate the memory of dear departed friends.

J. C. W.

"A book is a living voice. It is a spirit, walking on the face of the earth. It continues to be the living thought of a person separated from us by space and time. Men pass away; monuments crumble into dust—what remains of lives is human thought."—Smiles.

For upwards of fifty years (during their married life) the home of MR. and MRS. BENJAMIN WEBSTER, KINGFIELD, MAINE.

BENJAMIN WEBSTER was born in Wilton, Maine, February 24, 1802. He was the eldest son of Joseph and Ruth B. Webster. April 2, 1823, he married Miss Mehitable Eustice, and to them were born four children, all of whom have departed this life.

January 26, 1832, he married Miss Harriet, daughter of John and Sybil Clough, and to them were born six children, four of whom at this writing are living.

Benjamin Webster died June 15, 1884, and Mrs. Harriet Webster died August 8, 1887.

For upwards of fifty years, during all their married life, they lived in the house, an illustration of which is given on another page.

The following poem,—written by Mrs. LOUISE J. R. CHAPMAN—was presented to J. C. Webster of Hartford, Conn., upon his return from the funeral of his mother, Mrs. HARRIET WEBSTER.

MY MOTHER.

"He giveth His beloved sleep."

There's a rift in life's beautiful music,—
A shadow across its bright sun;—
A dirge on the tremulous zephyrs
That girdle my boyhood's home.

There's a pall o'er the dear old homestead;
The light of its altar hath fled;
"My mother," its ministering angel,
Lies sleeping the sleep of the dead.

I pass o'er the threshold in sorrow;
I stand by the time-hallow'd door,
Where God and his beckoning angels
Have folded their pinions before.

I enter in silence the chamber
My heart hath enshrined for long years;
No arms are uplifted to greet me,
And mine eyes are blinded with tears.

I whisper the dear name "mother,"—
I call yet again and again:
But only the lingering echoes
Give heed to my pleading refrain.

I gaze on the glorified features,—
I trace the blest smile as of yore,
Which blossom'd in sweet benedictions,
And will like a rose evermore.

The white palms have folded their welcome
In a fervent, unending caress;
And the fond eyes that glow'd at my coming,
Are holden in love but to bless.

The voice that erst lulled me to slumber,
And counseled me day after day,—
Whose prayers wrought the path for my footsteps,
And guarded its devious way,—

Is hush'd but to scatter its guerdons
In the cadence of heavenly lore,
And chant the glad songs of the home-land
With the blessed and redeemer "gone before."

So rest, saintly face, on thy pillow,—
Long vigils thy loved ones shall keep;
Christ seals thy white brow with his promise,
And giveth thee beautiful sleep.

OUR MOTHER.

O, the love of our dear mother,
'Tis strange we never prized
The best friend God had given us
Till our fond mother died.

The tender care she had for us,
The cheering words she said,
While listening to our prayers at night
Before we went to bed.

God grant that we may ne'er forget
That she above all other
Gave words of cheer to us most dear
That gentle loving mother.

J. C. W.

THE FINISHED LIFE.

There's a beauty in the spring time,
  With its fresh grass and its flowers,
With the song-birds in the branches
  And the children's happy hours.

But there's no less a beauty
  When the leaves turn gold and brown,
In the shortening days of autumn,
  When far south the birds have flown.

If the rough hand of the tempest,
  Tear away the fresh young leaves,
Over youthful vigor wasted,
  Who can wonder if one grieves?

But when from autumn branches,
  Drop the brown leaves one by one,
It seems as fair and fitting
  As the setting of the sun.

She has seen the world's fair beauty;
  And has tasted of its sweets;
And now past ten and three-score,
  Her life is all complete.

The face of him who loved her,
  Now beckons far away;
She has wrought the work God gave her
  Then wherefore should she stay?

And who, oh friends, would keep her?
  Sound no funeral knell;
Say of her life, "'Twas blessed!"
  And of her death, "'Tis well!"

DREAMING.

In the city's ceaseless clangor,
In the haunts of toiling men,
I am dreaming, ever dreaming,
Of my boyhood's home again.
I see faces, long since vanished,
I hear voices, long since stilled,
Whispering of my by-gone childhood,
And with tears my eyes are filled.

One face, always first among them
Beams with tenderness divine;
One voice murmurs loving comfort,
It is yours, O, mother mine.
Mother dear, the years are many
Since I said good-bye to you,
But I know that, though you've left me,
Love like yours is always true.

And when Death shall call me onward,
When my work on earth is done,
Waiting for me at the portal,
Mother, you will greet your son.

CELIA STANDISH.

"Take the bright shell from its home on the lea,
And wherever it goes it will sing of the sea;
So take the fond heart from its home and its hearth,
'Twill sing of the loved to the ends of the earth."

A LAST VISIT TO THE OLD HOUSE.

The dear old trees — where are they now!
  The birds — I know them all;
The warm winds leap the pine-clad hills
  Responsive to my call,
And kiss me soft on either cheek
  As oft they did of yore;
Alas! no eager footsteps crowd
  The old familiar door.

The rooms are empty — not a word
  Of welcome greets my ears;
Their echoes are a mockery —
  My eyes are filled with tears.
I cannot make you seem like home;
  So, now, old house we part.
Good-bye, sweet haunts of boyhood days
  Yet live but in my heart.

E. A. JENKS.

"THERE IS NO DEATH."

(Extract from a poem written by the late J. J. HENDERSON.)

"And though we call thee Death, 'tis our mistake —
Life, rather, is the name belongs to thee;
For in thy silvery voice if heard aright,
We recognize the word Excelsior.
Thou comest with tread as soft as zephyrs
Bearing the sweet perfume of opening flowers
When morning's dewey light breaks on the mead;
And thy touch, gentle as a mother's hand
Shall change this life to immortality."

THE NAME OF MOTHER.

There are words that speak of a quenchless love
  Which burns in the hearts we cherish,
And accents that tell of a friendship proved,
  That will never blight or perish.
There are soft words murmured by dear, dear lips,
  Far richer than any other;
But the sweetest word that the earth hath heard
  Is the blessed name of mother.

Oh, magical word! may it never die
  From the lips that love to speak it;
Nor melt away from the trusting hearts
  That even would break to keep it.
Was there ever a name that lived like this?
  Will there ever be such another?
The angels have reared in heaven a shrine
  For the holy name of mother.

I live for those who love me,
  For those who know me true
For the heaven that smiles above me,
  And awaits my spirit, too;
For the cause that lacks assistance
For the wrong that needs resistance
For the future in the distance
  And the good that I can do.

TRUST.

A picture memory brings to me;
I look across the years and see
Myself beside my mother's knee.

I feel her gentle hand restrain
My selfish moods, and know again
A child's blind sense of wrong and pain.

But wiser now, a man gray grown,
My childhood's needs are better known,
My mother's chastening love I own.

Gray grown, but in our Father's sight,
A child still groping for the light,
To read His works and ways aright.

I bow myself beneath His hand;
That pain itself for good was planned,
I trust but cannot understand.

I fondly dream it needs must be
That as my mother dealt with me,
So with His children dealeth He.

I wait, and trust the end will prove
That here and there, below, above,
The chastening heals, the pain is love.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

DYING.

Passing out of the shadow
  Into a purer light;
Stepping behind the curtain
  Getting a clearer sight.

Laying aside a burden
  This weary mortal coil;
Done with the world's vexations,
  Done with its tears and toil;

Tired of all earth's playthings,
  Heartsick, and ready to sleep,
Ready to bid our friends farewell
  Wondering why they weep.

Passing out of the shadow
  Into eternal day,—
Why do we call it dying?
  This sweet going away.

LOUISA K. LONG.

HOME.

Oh! let me seek my home once more,
  For but a little while,
But once above my couch to see
  My mother's gentle smile:—
It haunts me in my waking hours,
  'Tis ever in my dreams,
With all the pleasant paths at home,
  Rocks, woods and shaded streams.

WORLD OF SEEMING.

It is a world of seeming;
The changeless moon seems changing ever;
The sun sets daily but sets never;
So near the stars and yet so far,
So small they seem, so large they are —
It is a world of seeming.

And so it seems that she is dead;
Yet so seems only; for instead,
Her life is just begun; and this —
Is but an empty chrysalis;
While she unseen to mortal eyes,
Now wins her way to brighter skies
Beyond this world of seeming.

PRAY AND WAIT.

I know not by what methods rare
But this I know, God answers prayer.
I know not when he sends the word
That tells us fervent prayer is heard.
I know not if the blessings sought
Will come in just the guise I thought;
I leave my prayers with Him alone,
Whose will is wiser than my own.

Around the man who seeks a noble end,
Not angels, but divinities attend.

EMERSON.

THE ARROW AND THE SONG.

I shot an arrow into the air,
  It fell to earth I know not where;
For, so swiftly it flew, the sight
  Could not follow it in its flight.

I breathed a song into the air,
  It fell to earth, I know not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong,
  That it can follow the flight of song?

Long, long afterward, in an oak
  I found the arrow still unbroke;
And the song, from beginning to end,
  I found again in the heart of a friend.

Were a star quenched on high
  For ages would its light
Stream downward from the sky
  Upon our mortal sight.

So, when a great man dies,
  For years beyond our ken
The light he leaves behind him lies
  Upon the paths of men.

H. W. LONGFELLOW.

The man who has a thousand friends
  Has not a friend to spare;
But he who has one enemy
  Will meet him everywhere.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

THE OLD MAN'S DREAM.

O, for one hour of youthful joy!
  Give back my twentieth spring!
I'd rather laugh a bright-haired boy,
  Than reign a gray-haired king.

Off with the wrinkled spoils of age;
  Away with learning's crown;
Tear out life's wisdom-written page,
  And cast its trophies down.

One moment let my life-blood stream
  From boyhood's fount of fame;
Give me one giddy, reeling dream
  Of life, and love, and fame.

My listening angel heard the prayer,
  And calmly smiling, said,
"If I but touch thy silvered hair,
  Thy hasty wish had sped.

"But is there nothing in the track,
  To bid thee fondly stay,
While the swift seasons hurry back,
  To find the wished-for day?"

Ah, truest soul of woman kind,
  Without thee what were life?
One bliss I cannot leave behind,—
  I'll take my precious wife.

The angel took a sapphire pen,
  And wrote in rainbow hue,
"The man would be a boy again
  And be a husband too.

And is there nothing yet unsaid,
  Before the change appears?
Remember all thy gifts have fled
  With these dissolving years."

"Why, yes, I would one favor more;
  My fond parental joys—
I could not bear to lose them all;
  I'll take my girls and boys."

The smiling angel dropped his pen
  "Why, this will never do;
The man would be a boy again,
  And be a father too?"

And so I laughed; my laughter woke
  The household with its noise,
I wrote my dream when morning broke,
  To please my girls and boys.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

What use for the rope if it be not flung
Till the swimmer's grasp to the rock has clung?
What help is a Comrade's bugle blast,
When the peril of Alpine heights is past?
What need that the spurring pæan roll,
When the runner is safe within the goal?
What worth is eulogy's blandest breath,
When whispered in ears that are hushed in death?
No, no, if you have but a word of cheer,
Speak it while I am alive to hear.

The following poem was written by Miss CELIA STANDISH of Concord, N. H. for the Reunion of the Sons and Daughters of Maine, held at the winter residence of J. C. Webster, Southern Pines, N. C.

MAINE REUNION.

Like a song of the waters our pine trees are sighing,
And soft from the southland the spring breezes blow,
While afar in our birthplace the winds still are chilling,
The earth is all white 'neath its mantle of snow.

Oh Maine, our dear mother, your children have gathered
To render their tribute of honor today,
We ne'er have forgotten the home of our childhood,
Tho' years have gone by and we meet far away.

Yet still in our ears rings the beat of the billows
That surge and retreat from thy wild rocky shore.
Yet still in our ears is the song of thy forests,
Where roams the shy deer, and the proud eagles soar.

And faded from sight are the scenes of the southland:
We see but the spot which is dearest on earth,
Whether high on thy mountains or close to thy seaside
We never forget; 'tis the place of our birth.

Oh Maine, we have striven to honor and serve thee,
And ne'er to bring shame to the home of our pride;
But tell us in truth have we wrought for thy glory?
Are you pleased with the sons who have gone from thy side?

From the West, from the South comes the voice of thy children,
Where others are eager their service to claim,
And they call to thee, "Mother; we have not forgotten;
We work for thy honor; our fame is thy fame!"

And many, thy sons, who in slumber are lying,
Our nation remembers and loves to this day.
They have lived out their lives with the courage you gave them,
And sleep 'neath your sod or in graves far away.

And we who remain, to the last we will love thee,
To the last we will strive to uphold thy fair fame,
And until from our lips fades the breath of the dying,
Oh Maine, our dear mother, we rev'rence thy name!

JUDGE NOT.

We have no right to judge a man
Until he's fairly tried;
Should we not like his company,
We know the world is wide.

Some may have faults and who has not?
The old as well as young;
Perhaps we may for aught we know,
Have fifty to their one.

It is not much the world can give,
With all its subtle art,
And golden gems are not the things
To satisfy the heart.

But, oh! if those who cluster round
The altar and the hearth,
Have gentle words and loving smiles,
How beautiful is earth.

BIRTHDAY MUSINGS.

My age is three score years and ten!
  Our years — how swift they pass!
How truly did the psalmist pen
  "Our days are as the grass."

Though three score years and ten they be,
  It seems but yesterday
I sat upon my mother's knee
  In helpless infancy.

But yesterday, with prospects fair,
  I wooed a youthful bride;
A lady, now, with silvery hair,
  Is sitting by my side.

But yesterday, were seen at play
  My children, on the lea;
But children's children I to-day
  Am dandling on my knee.

The story does not give me pain;
  The whole is briefly told,
The fact stands out in bold relief
  That I am growing old.

A land beyond the swelling tide
  With eyes of faith is viewed,
When carried to the other side
  My youth will be renewed.

J. A. Woods.

WONDER WHO THEY'RE FOR?

My ma's been working very hard,
  And also very sly,
And keeps her sewing out of sight
  Whenever I am nigh.
I asked her once what made her stop
  Her work when I came in;
She said she only stopped to get
  A needle, thread or pin.

The bureau drawer next to mine
  Is locked both night and day,
And when ma wants it open
  She sends me off to play.
I stole a peep one afternoon,
  Although it was not right;
But, oh! the little things I saw
  Were such a pretty sight.

The cutest, nicest little clothes—
  Just big enough for doll;
But then I knew they're not for her—
  She needs them not at all.
I know they're not for ma or pa
  Nor me nor brother "Hor,"
For we can't wear such little clothes;
  I wonder who they're for?

GOD'S ETERNAL GOODNESS.

I dimly guess from blessings known
  Of greater out of sight
And with the chastened psalmist own
  His judgments, too, are right.

I long for household voices gone,
  For vanished smiles I long,
But God hath led my dear ones on,
  And He can do no wrong.

I know not what the future hath
  Of marvel or surprise,
Assured alone that life and death
  His mercy underlies.

And so beside the silent sea
  I wait the muffled oar;
No harm from Him can come to me
  On ocean or on shore.

I know not where His islands lift
  Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
  Beyond His love and care.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

GOOD WORDS AND DEEDS.

I need not be missed if another succeed me
  To reap down the fields which in spring I have sown;
He who plowed and who sowed is not missed by the reaper
  He is only remembered by what he has done.

Not myself, but the truth that in life I have spoken—
  Not myself, but the seed that in life I have sown,
I shall pass on to ages, all about me forgotten,
  Save the truth I have spoken, the things I have done.

THE OLD FRONT DOOR.

I remember the time when I used to sit
  A happy and thoughtless boy,
When father came home from his work at last,
  And I was tired of my toy;
I remember the time, and none more sweet
  Shall I know forever more,
When I sat at eve by my mother's side
  On the sill of the old front door.

I remember I'd sit till I fell asleep,
  List'ning to their loving talk,
While the crickets chirped and the fire-fly bright
  Flew over the garden walk;
And often would father tell the tale
  Of the time long years before,
When he led his bride to a happy home,
  O'er the sill of the old front door.

I remember well, when grandfather died,
  Over eighty years old was he,
How sadly I knew that never again
  He would ride me upon his knee;
And though but a gay and thoughtless boy,
  I wept, and my heart was sore
When I saw them bear him slowly out
  O'er the sill of the old front door.

It is many a weary day since then,
  And I, too, am old and gray;
But the tears come crowding into my eyes
  When I think of that long-past day;
And I only hope that whatever end
  Fate may have for me in store,
I shall cross once more ere I pass away
  O'er the sill of the old front door.

AS WE GROW OLD.

As we grow old — as all must do —
And life takes on a sweeter hue,
Things long forgotten come to cheer
The burden of each passing year,
And as they one by one unfold,
Give recompense for growing old.

Our happy childhood days of yore
Unlock themselves from memory's store,
And once again we know the joys
We had when little girls or boys,
Without the after-sorrows rolled,
But put away when we grow old.

Again as merry tots we play
And in the daisy meadows stray;
And bake our mud pies in the sun,
And home from school delighted run;
Again the fairy tales are told —
We all grow young when we grow old.

Again we're in our childhood's home,
Without a wish to ever roam;
The dear old pictures and the clock,
The chair in which we loved to rock
While mother held us, we behold
With eager eyes when we grow old.

Once more we hear the birds that sung
Around our door when we were young,
And see the garden, yes, and smell
Its flowers. At the dear old well
We quaff its crystal water cold
With added thirst when we grow old.

As we grow old—as all must do—
Our childhood pleasures we review,
And in those happy days we seem
To live again all in a dream;
But 'tis a dream most sweet to hold—
When we grow young by growing old.

H. C. DODGE.

THE OLD HOME.

Between broad fields of wheat and corn
Is the lowly house where I was born;
The peach-tree leans against the wall,
And the woodbine wanders over all.

There is the barn and as of yore,
I can smell the hay from the open door,
And see the busy swallows throng,
And hear the peewee's mournful song.

O, ye who daily cross the sill
Step lightly, for I love it still;
And when you crowd the old barn eaves,
Then think what countless harvest sheaves
Have passed within that scented door,
To gladden eyes that are no more.

Life is so grand, so beautiful, so full of meaning, so splendid in its opportunities for action, so hopeful in its high results, that despite all its sorrows, I would willingly live it over again.

INTRODUCTORY TO ANCESTRAL RECORD.

I have for considerable time anticipated the preparing of a brief ancestral record of the Webster Family. The work has been facilitated by the valuable assistance given by relatives and friends,— and without it very little could have been accomplished. No doubt errors will appear — it could hardly be otherwise — but every effort has been made to prevent them. Indifference, bad memory, and a failure to keep family records will account for errors — yet in the main I trust the history will prove sufficiently interesting and reliable to secure for it a place in every family represented.

There is compensation to the editor in the making and renewing of acquaintances, and the pleasant correspondence with those whom he would otherwise not have known.

EBENEZER WEBSTER,

Brother of Joseph, was born Oct. 10, 1714. He married Susannah Batchelder of Hampton, July 20, 1738.

EBENEZER WEBSTER,

Son of Ebenezer and Susannah, was born April 22, 1739. He married for his first wife Mehitable Smith. She died March 28, 1774. To them were born eight children. For his second wife he married Abigail Eastman. By her three children were born:—EZEKIEL, DANIEL and SARAH. He served under Gen. Jeffrey Amherst in the French war. Was one of the original settlers of Salisbury (now Franklin, N. H.) He was captain of the Salisbury militia, at the siege of Boston, in 1775. Served at White Plains and at Bennington. Was at West Point at the time of the treason of Arnold; attained the rank of colonel. He was a man of natural endowments and force of character.

EZEKIEL WEBSTER,

Eldest son of Ebenezer and Abigail, (brother of Daniel) was born March 11, 1780. Was a graduate of Dartmouth college, and became a lawyer of considerable prominence in New Hampshire. He served in the State legislature. Died at Concord, N. H., April 10, 1829.

DANIEL WEBSTER,

Son of Ebenezer and Abigail, and brother of Ezekiel, was born Jan. 18, 1782. He had but limited educational advantages in childhood. He was a few months at Phillips academy, Exeter, N. H.; completed his preparation for college in the family of Rev.

Samuel Wood of Boscawen. Entered Dartmouth college in 1797; supported himself mainly by teaching winters. Was considered the foremost scholar of his class. He distinguished himself in the debates of the societies. Graduated in 1801. Studied law, and soon became prominent in that profession. He married Grace Fletcher of Hopkinton, N. H., June, 1808. She died in Jan. 1828. He was a federalist, but for several years did not court political honors. Was elected to Congress in 1812, and soon took a prominent part in the debates. Moved to Boston, Mass., in 1816, where he devoted himself to his law practice for seven years. Was elected almost unanimously to Congress in 1822. He continued in public life during the remainder of his life, and was recognized as the leading statesman and orator of the land. He was very fond of athletic sports, hunting and fishing, and gave considerable attention to scientific agriculture and the improvement of stock. He was of genial and convivial habits; improvident in money matters, which were for years managed by the "solid men of Boston;" abounded in gayety and humor in his conversation. He was the supreme representative of American eloquence in its argumentative and logical aspect. For his second wife he married Caroline LeRoy of New York city in Dec., 1829. He died Oct. 24, 1852.

JOSEPH WEBSTER,
